Layered floors

Product ready for underfloor heating

Two-layer flooring,
up to 6 mm of usable layer

a good choice for years

Wooden boards and parquet have decorated Polish houses for years. They enchant by their natural beauty and tempt with innovative functionality. Yet, the choice of floor is a decision for years. The answer to the expectations of the most demanding users are finished two-layer wooden floors, such as FertigDeska and FertigParkiet, which have enjoyed great customer interest for years.

The success of two-layer floors lies in their construction. The top layer, also called noble, which is up to 6 mm thick, is made of oak, ash or exotic wood. The bottom layer is made of durable hardwood or plywood. Excellent selection of raw materials and appropriate, perpendicular arrangement of layers in relation to one another allows to minimize the work of wood. The result is a floor of particular durability and resistance to deformation. Owing to their layered construction, these products are recommended for use on underfloor heating.

Finished two-layered floors have one more unquestionable advantage - they are ready to use almost immediately after installation. This fact, in addition to allowing for substantial time savings, also has a great aesthetic significance - the preservation of surface, right at the stage of production, guarantees a uniform and an even protective layer.

After years of use, when we want to refresh a wooden surface or add a new glow, it can successfully undergo a grinding process. The thickness of the top layer of Jawor-Parkiet flooring has been selected, so that it can be sanded even several times in the period of a few decades of use. This guarantees a safe restoration of its surface and allows to enjoy the unique beauty of the natural, raw material for many long years.

CHEVRON

The wooden, French herringbone-patterned floor gained its popularity among French kings and nobility as early as in the 16th century. The flooring captivated with its precise, symmetrical pattern and added sophisticated elegance to interiors. Now, it has returned with a more modern and functional twist – a finished Chevron floor. Short sides of individual boards are cut at a 45-degree angle, thus forming a shape of an arrowhead. Cutting boards during the production process shortens fitting and guarantees high-quality installation of the complicated pattern, which would be very difficult if each board were cut separately. A Chevron floor does not require sanding, filling or lacquering and it is ready to use right after installation.

The mark of responsible forestry

Only products identified as FSC® Certified

In harmony with nature

Surrounded with lush green forests and clean lakes we are close to nature every day. It inspires us to work. The respect for natural environment and requirements related to its protection are reflected in each stage of the floors production.

Raw material only from a trusted source

Keeping in mind the meaning of wood in the environment, we treat it with due respect. The raw material, from which we produce our floors, is almost exclusively the wood from Polish forests, where the management is conducted with preserving the constancy of ecosystems, its balanced development and environmental protection. The rest of the materials used to make our floors are exotic species from proven sources.

Ecology confirmed by certificates

The confirmation of our production standards according to the highest world norms of the responsible forest management is the FSC® certificate (Forest Stewardship Council). It is the first and currently the most popular global certification system of forests and wooden products. It is awarded only for the highest quality products that meet the strict standards.

Naturally from start to finish

We see the environmental concern not only as a choice of the right wood, but also an adequate protection of the finished product. For this purpose we only use lacquers and oils that do not contain solvents or harmful substances. Raw material is always processed to the end. In the high-pressure compression of oak and ash sawdust a PDJ briquette is formed - our environmentally friendly alternative to firewood.

Ecological lacquer or natural oil-wax?

Wooden floors will decorate the interior of our home for many years. The key to their use and care is the choice of the form of preservation on the floor, which you can make at the purchase stage. Our products are covered with eight layers of ecological UV lacquer or three layers of natural oil-wax. Both methods guarantee effective protection and make the floors exceptionally durable. What are the differences and which care product will be more suitable for you?
Oil-wax is a mixture of natural oils and liquid wax.

The preservation of wooden floor with this product is about saturating its surface, which subtly emphasizes the structure and color of the wood and exposes its natural drawing. An indispensable advantage of oil-wax is the possibility of punctual renovation, so it is especially recommended for use in rooms where the floor is more vulnerable to minor damage. This substance does not clog the pores of the wood, contributing to the creation of micro climate in the house. Composed of pure natural ingredients, it is the ideal solution for people with allergies. Lacquer will be the right choice for those who appreciate comfort and do not want to put extra effort to regular floor maintenance. This substance is extremely practical in everyday use and easy to clean. Traditional painting results in a thin protective layer on the wood surface, but does not allow for local repairs. It provides an excellent protection while underlining its beautiful and stylish look.

The line was extended with three new products - Luna, Vulcano and Oro - which will take us on a journey to charming and undiscovered corners of the Italian Peninsula. The products from this family are colored with natural oil-wax and have some elegance, added during the brushing process. Care guide of Jawor-Parkiet wooden floors

3 steps to longevity

A wooden floor is every interior’s decoration - it adds class, elegance and provides it with individuality. How to ensure its longevity? Based on many years of experience, Jawor-Parkiet has developed a simple and economical three steps’ method of floor care, which guarantees that wooden boards and parquet will serve us for years.

STEP 1: Make the right choice

In order to be able to enjoy the natural qualities of wooden floors for many years, you must not forget to protect their surfaces from damage caused by everyday use. This decision, which you make at the purchase stage, is crucial for the continued use of boards or parquets. Jawor-Parkiet products are factory-protected in two ways - by eight layers of UV lacquer or three layers of natural oil-wax, a mixture of liquid oils and liquid wax. Both methods provide complete protection and make the products exceptionally durable.

STEP 2: Maintain it every day

Regardless of the preservation methods used, in order to avoid the damages on the surface it is necessary to maintain for the floor during everyday use. To do this, you need to follow some basic rules. Do you know which ones?

- Use soft footwear and secure furniture with special felt coasters.
- Avoid contamination that can scratch a wooden surface, such as sand.
- Remove any dirt using a soft brush and a soft-tip vacuum-cleaner.
- Try to avoid excessive mechanical loads on the floor.
- Make sure the air humidity in the room stays between 45-60%.
- Wipe the floor dry or with a slightly dampened cloth
- Remember to remove any dirt (and spills liquids first) as soon as you notice it.

Did you know that...

To enjoy the beauty of the wooden floor, you must immediately remove the dirt, using soft brushes, delicately wiped cloth or spray mop and professional care products - a concentrate for lacquered or oil-waxed Jawor-Parkiet floors?

STEP 3: Trust the professionals

Lacquered and oil-waxed floors

Regular cleaning and maintenance are the only way to make your wooden floors look beautiful and fresh. With a view to those who want to take care of their natural qualities and ensure their longevity, a line of professional care products for Jawor-Parkiet wooden has been created.

Floors for years How to take care of Jawor-Parkiet floors?

Lacquered floor – covered with eight layers of UV-cured acrylic lacquer.

- After the floor installation, it should be preserved with Impregnate for Jawor-Parkiet lacquered floors. Its aim it to protect the edges and gaps from moisture. This is done by the parquet work crew (at an additional cost) and it is the last stage of the work.
- For the on-going protection, use Jawor-Parkiet concentrate for cleaning of lacquered floors.

Oil-waxed floor – covered with three layers of oil-wax.

- After placing the floor it is advisable to protect it with Impregnant for oil-waxed floors of Jawor-Parkiet series. Its aim it to protect the edges and gaps from moisture. This is done by the parquet work crew (at an additional cost) and it is the last stage of the work.
- As much as possible, the floor should be “dried” with a microfiber mop. For an on-going “wet” protective care Jawor-Parkiet concentrate for cleaning of oil-waxed floors or other should be used, as indicated by Jawor-Parkiet.
- The natural feature of oil-wax floors is the formation of routes, wiping of oil-wax and washing off of hard wax coating. That is why, approximately after 20 washings the surface should be impregnated with a product for oil-waxed floors of Jawor-Parkiet series or other, indicated by Jawor-Parkiet.

Maintain constant air humidity

Wood, due to its mechanical and physical properties, changes its dimensions and shapes as the temperature and relative humidity change. Thus, it is vital to keep the humidity in the room at 45-60 percent. The rooms where the floor will be used should be equipped with a room thermometer, humidity meter and humidifier. These interiors need to be ventilated in the spring and summer, and air humidifiers should be used during the heating period.
